

RESEARCH LOG

BACKGROUND:

One of the challenges of reviewing research is having a concise way to store the information you encounter for later. We recommend having a specific document or desktop folder to log all of the research you review, or to use a template to save links, citations, and create a running list of references you can use later on when you need to pull a resource for a particular student.

MATERIALS:

- Printable Research Log
- Access to online search database

INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Download and print the research log sheet (or one for each search you intend to complete).
2. At the top, select the keywords for your search and record the date of search.
3. Review resources and highlight any items in the log that are relevant to the current executive functioning resources needed for you or your learner.
4. When you're finished with the research log, scan and upload into a folder or file the printed paper copy in a folder for later use.
